Carmel, California

Dear Miss Kellogg:

My enclosed letter to you about your mother's poem was ready to go into the mails when word reached me of her death. My wife joins me in sending you and your family our deepest sympathy. We hope that you can take consolation in your mother's long and rich life, marked as it was by a sensitive and creative spirit which found such a satisfying outlet in poetry.

Your mother and father leave many friends at Stanford, and I know that they join us in sending this message of sympathy.

Sincerely,

J. E. Wallace Sterling

Dear Jean –

The book of Poems is published so beautifully that I wish to keep it in my hands constantly – I am thankful that you remembered me and sent me Prelude which are the words and story of your Mother Charlotte – I am not a great admirer of poetry – but these are different, so I am singing their praise on all sides –

I shall keep the little card, so the next time I am down your way I hope to get in contact with you – I was down at Helen Russells' at her Carmel Valley Ranch over the Christmas Holidays, but then I had not received "Prelude" or I would have Telephoned you, on one of those Holiday Days but I am sure to be down soon again.

With warmest regards and affectionate greetings from an old friendship

Yours

Raymond Brusby.

Dear Mrs. Dickie:

Please accept the thanks of this library for the copy of your mother's book Prelude which you sent to us. We are delighted to have the book in our collection of works by Carmel authors and are most grateful for your continuing remembrance of the library.

Very sincerely yours,

Ruth Galvin Thornburg

Lloyd arrived here the day after we came home. He is in Honolulu this weekend. Thus, last night was our first chance to share the precious volume. Thank you, thank you - both for being sure it is in print and for letting us be proud possessors.

Lloyd will return briefly for another meeting here the middle of the week. Then he flies to Hong Kong and on around the world - to be in N.Y. Jan 18th!!

Our love and Happy New Year to you both. Ever fondly, Carol.

Jan dear:

Osborne and I had a rare experience last evening. We sat before our fire while I read "Prelude" aloud, living with Rachel in each vibrant word - as we saw her in the snowy Alps and the endless prairies of Nebraska.

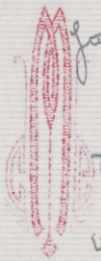
How vividly, how sympathetically your wonderful mother lets us know her own remarkable family!



We were thrilled to find this beautifully completed volume under our Christmas tree and intended to take it with us when we left for Palm Springs — after dinner at Giorgio's in Palo Alto that night: but in the confusion of packing both for the trip and the family gathering it was left at home.

We stayed over in Pasadena for new years — a "first" for Osborne at the Tournament of Roses; nostalgia — for me —, and

Big Sur,
January 7th

Dear Jean,

"Prelude" is lying here on the table beside me, and I have been deeply moved by its strength and tale. A beautiful clear ringing narrative filled with vitality and exquisite poetry!

To have published this at the close of your Mother's life is as if you had reawakened her spirit and placed it in the hands of her friends to go on living. It was a splendid thing to have done, Jean - a lasting memorial to her. And the fact that it was left unfinished, is life itself, and the reader, at the close, carries on in his or her mind a continuation of Rachel's story....and so it continues to live in the imaginations of all its readers.

Thank you for thinking of Nat and me with this memorial book and for considering us your Mother's friends - which we are indeed, proud to be.

A fine year ahead to you and Jim! May it be a rewarding year but especially, a very happy year for you both!

Affectionately,

Margaret.

Mrs. Jean Kellogg Dickie

Dear Mrs. Dickie:

It was with a great deal of pride that I received "Prelude" the book of poems as written by your beloved mother.

I used the word - Pride - deliberately, for that is the impression one had - meeting her, knowing her and that you were an American along with her.

I envy those who knew her intimately, who shared to a greater extent her quiet and soothing manner, her esteem in high places and her ability to tackle scientific problems and see them through to a successful conclusions

I send to you my grateful thanks and appreciation for your thoughtfulness and the gift for remembrance.

Sincerely yours.

Dear Jean,

We want to thank you for including us in your list of friends of Charlotte Kellogg to whom you sent copies of the charming book "Prelude". We are so happy to have it and will treasure it always. It is a thing of beauty in every way and a most appropriate memorial.

Prelude arrived the day after Mimi and family left for the east after two hectic weeks here spent mostly in the offices of doctors and dentists. Little Lidna was in fine health but both Mimi and Bob needed medical attention. They are visiting the Laughlin family in Princeton now but will soon start looking for an apt. in Cambridge. Once they are settled in their own apt. we will send the book to them on loan as we know both Mimi and Bob will understand and appreciate it.

Mimi + Bob drove to Carmel and hoped to call you but their time was so limited they did little else than visit Uncle Roy. When they return in 1½ yrs. we hope to have a much more relaxed visit with them.

We also hope to see you and meet your niece James before too much time passes. Reese has started work on another book so we have no travel plans now - expect to be working here for some months. We would like to see you either here or in Carmel, we will surely call you next time we get to Carmel.

Again, thank you for giving us the privilege of owning copy no 188 of the Prelude with its attractive illustrations and significant poem.

All best wishes to you both for 1961

Fondly

Dear Mrs. Dickie;

To say "Thank you for a wonderful present" seems completely inadequate in expressing my reaction to "Prelude". My wife and I both feel as if we had known the Zell family through all their fortunes and misfortunes. It is not only an interesting but an inspiring writing. Should I be tempted at any time to complain about "rough spots" in life, I will think back to "Prelude" and probably find that my problems are nowhere near as large in most cases as those faced and conquered by the Swiss family.

Thank you again for both, the gift and for honoring us in presenting it to us.

Sincerely

Dear Mrs. Dickie,

I would like to express my gratitude for your having sent me a copy of Prelude.

I had heard much about the beauties of Switzerland from my late father, who studied at the University of Zurich. In Mrs. Kellogg's book I found descriptions of the same beauty expressed in magnificent verse. The fine portrayals of the figures, against the background of the towering Alps, together with the vivid imagery, give an unforgettable experience.

Prelude reveals the same nobility of thought and loftiness of feelings which characterized all the other works of the authoress. The only material difference is that in this case beauty is captured in verse.

Sincerely yours,

J. Kasparek-Obst

Do forgive the tardiness of this note and my informal way of writing you, but I lost your address which was on the wrapping paper, and have only just been able to get it from Raymond Armsby.

I cannot begin to tell you how deeply I appreciated your thought of me in sending the lovely book of poems of your mother. I was always such a great admirer of hers and her wonderful brain, and this will be to me a very cherished momento. Already, it is giving me many hours of pleasure.

With affectionate greetings and deepest gratitude,

Ever sincerely,

Dear Jean,

I can never thank you enough for so kindly remembering us.- I was deeply moved by the gift of your Mother's beautiful poetic Saga and I appreciate it with all my heart, ever full of affection for Her.-

I did not write at once, because I had to read and to re-read and fully to absorb the delightful text of "Prelude", its musicality, its rhythm, its subtlety and its force.-

Your dear Mother put so much of herself into it that,

as I read it, it gave me the impression that I was listening to her telling me the story in the simple, poetically graphic and convincing way that we knew as a very personal part of her great charm.-

Thank you ever so much for this gift which I shall always treasure.-

Gladys and I think of her so often and will miss her warm friendship always.

Bless you, Jean dear, with all our best love

Yours ever

John

Dear Miss Kellogg:

The Library of the University of California acknowledges with very sincere appreciation the recent receipt of the very lovely copy of your mother's book of verse Prelude.

from Dawson-L.A.?

This volume was requested specifically as an item to be included in our "Western Authors Exhibition", a group of books selected by the Rounce and Coffin Club. This exhibit will be held in this Library during May. After the exhibition closes, the book will be added to the collection in belles lettres in the Library. We shall be most pleased to see that it carries a bookplate in memory of your mother.

The University's prestige is really increased only by the talents and ability of its graduates.

Thank you very much for your courtesy and your interest in sending us this gift copy.

Dear James

First to thank you for the lovely book you sent me — Your Mollie's poem confirms what I felt she must be - And I read & re-read her strangely beautiful Conceptions — which rose like medieval Castles in the heart beyond the mere historical events ——— And your Lane Poems made such a beautiful Book — print & Cover & all ——— it is a treasure I am happy to have & much touched to think of it ——— Also again thanks for all you say

Of my last poem v my work in the foundation ——— Unfinished as yet
and I have been told to go easy
by my Doctor for a while — hence this delay in Thank you —

I am well again but still going easy in a play — which made the new policy of suffering I needs must correct and change before any thing its appearance ———

Ena is not happy unless to & Some day Now hope to see for mine at leisure —
perhaps in the Foundation ——

again Thank for how wonderful it is to come near & touch again
my love, Good wishes

Dear Jean:

I am so grateful for Prelude.
I shall always remember her knowledge, her sweetness and charity and I am sure Dick does too. There was a great companionship and friendship between the three of us and hence I appreciate your gift.

Dick would have loved Prelude; he had the capacity to receive and be grateful for lovely things and so again I am more than grateful for the addition to our little library and I am sure your good and loving mother knows it and Dick too.

Dear Jean -

I wanted to write to you before I left Washington to thank you for the book with your mothers poems. How pleased I was to get it and proud too that you included me in her list of friends. I haven't had a leisure minute since Christmas to tell you this or even to read the book but I am very much looking forward to doing so on my return. I left Washington just after the inauguration and was out of my house for the whole week. Because of being in the heart of Georgetown and surrounded by Kennedys. I was able to rent my house to one of the family which means much preparation beforehand. Now I am visiting in a climate rather like yours I believe - or does the temperature ever fall to 45° at Carmel? We are freezing at the moment. Please forgive me for not using your married name. I have no papers here but wanted so much to thank you before any more time Elapsed. How much your wonderful mother would have appreciated such a thought! Wishing you every happiness and hoping we meet some day -

I am, gratefully yours, Marcella Brownlow
